

Training Managers' Symposium

This year our training sergeant attended a nine-hour virtual symposium hosted by the California Peace Officer Standards and Training. The focus of this symposium was to update our training material and methods to current standards and provide a means to confirm we are training to best practices. Some of the lecturers discussed how training made a difference in their approach to problem solving and to policy making. Also discussed were practical means of using available technology to have a larger impact and retention on essential material. There were several new laws passed this year and other that are on the horizon that pertain to police work. These were discussed and larger agencies shared from their failures and successes.